Dear prospective doctoral student,

Thank you for considering the National College of Education at National-Louis University (NLU) as the place to pursue your doctoral studies.

The Doctoral Programs of the National College of Education (NCE) are the result of more than a century of excellence in providing progressive teacher education. Our doctoral programs are built on a tradition of excellence and a commitment to multi-cultural and multi-disciplinary perspectives. Faculty and students in the program engage in critical reflection on the relationships between theory, research and practice. They explore these relationships through course work, inquiry and writing.

National College of Education offers doctoral studies in five main areas:

Curriculum and Social Inquiry (with a variety of minor concentrations)*

Disability and Equity in Education (with a variety of minor concentrations)*

Educational Leadership (meets Academic Requirements for Superintendent Certification)

Educational Psychology

Concentration in School Psychology

Concentration in Human Learning and Development

Reading and Language (with a variety of minor concentrations)

*No GRE required for this program

Please note that the doctoral program application deadlines are as follows:

- October 15 and April 15 for Curriculum and Social Inquiry, Disability and Equity in Education, and Educational Leadership
- January 15 and April 15 for Educational Psychology
- September 15 and March 1 for Reading and Language

A completed application form, scores from the GRE test (general section), letters of recommendation and transcripts must be received by the Graduate Admissions office by the above dates. For additional information about the Graduate Record Exam, please contact Educational Testing Services at 1.800.GRE.Call or <http://www.gre.org>.
